

The School of Social Work at Syracuse University embraces the social worker's commitment to the values of human diversity and the dignity and worth of all people, particularly those who are oppressed, vulnerable, or living in poverty.

You can play a vital role in helping vulnerable members of society navigate everyday challenges. From diagnosing mental health issues and working with clients to obtaining medical or financial assistance services to advocating on their behalf, you can be part of a life-changing profession.

Learn about our programs:

- a bachelor of science degree in social work
- a master in social work degree
- the advanced standing program for students who hold an undergraduate degree in Social Work
